

PET HEALTH INSURANCE

Many pet owners are unaware of pet insurance options and the benefits that it can provide to many families. Pet health insurance is usually much less expensive than human health insurance and is a way for unexpected pet expenses to be met. Different pet insurance providers offer many different options depending on the individual preferences/situations. As a pet owner, you will be able to see any veterinarian with most insurance providers, be involved with treatment plan for your pet, and know the costs involved in the care for your pet. Unlike many human health insurance providers, pet health insurance does not dictate what veterinarian you can see and the type of care received by your pet.

Like all insurance, pet health insures against health costs while charging a monthly premium, whether or not a claim is made. Owners provide the veterinarian with a form to sign regarding the diagnosis for their pet; the owner pays the veterinarian in full and then submits the form to the insurance company for reimbursement.

Many pet health insurance companies with multiple policies are available. Some owners may choose to go with a standard wellness plan covering routine care all the way up to plans that address major emergencies and surgeries. Even pets that spend most of their lives indoors can benefit from health insurance plans as accidents can occur in the home and those pets can develop various illnesses.

See also: www.grangervet.com/Client_Resources.html

Dr. Jennifer Perusek

Dr. Frank Perusek